

P-12 Syllabus
RELIGIOUS and CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

1. RATIONALE

In the diverse socio-religious landscape that is Australia it is vital that students in Anglican schools have knowledge of how religious beliefs and practices inform behaviour and influence personal and community proclivities. This Anglican Schools Religious Education Syllabus not only seeks to encourage the development of religious knowledge, but also to embolden students to broaden their understanding of what can be learned from religion.

This syllabus envisages facilitating the above mission through academic rigour, pastoral perspectives, a broad range of topic choices and consideration of each school's domestic character.

PURPOSE

The purpose of the syllabus is to:

- promote a consistency of religious education across the schools in the diocese;
- provide topical and academic guidelines for teachers of Religious Education in Anglican schools;
- emphasise the Anglican approach to religion and how it has relevance and dignity within the myriad of competing religious, social and political ideologies that abound in 21st century Australia;
- help develop a religious literacy for students;
- provide students with the ability and opportunity to think critically and analytically to make informed decisions about religious beliefs and practices, ethics and personal faith;
- provide students with the opportunity to experience religious practices and beliefs intrinsic to the Anglican Communion.

APPROACH

Ultimately, the syllabus strongly concurs with Garth Read and Michael Grimmet's integrative approach to Religious Education (Erricker, Lowndes & Bellchamber, 2011, p24) where students will learn about religion and learn from religion. In support of these over-arching foci the syllabus has identified six strands relating to religious enquiry, with each strand being addressed at least twice across the course of both the Primary and Secondary years.

THE STRANDS:

- The Bible and Christian Belief
- Christian Traditions and Practice
- World Religions
- Christian Living
- The Inner Life
- Thinking about Religion.

THE SYLLABUS AND OTHER CURRICULA

While this syllabus is a stand-alone document, teachers might also consider referring to the Australian Curriculum's General Competencies in their work program. Teachers will find that many of these are inherently fundamental to the teaching and learning related to Religious Education. In addition, Heads of Faculty could also incorporate Marzano's list of cognitive verbs, as recommended by QCAA. The inclusion of these two are seen as important adjuncts to the ASC's RE syllabus and serve to highlight the academic content that underpins the desired outcomes of this syllabus.

INTENDED USERS

This Syllabus has been developed for use in Anglican schools across South-East Queensland. Accordingly, the primary users and implementers of this document will be:

- Principals;
- Heads of Faculty/Department of Religious Education (under the varying titles employed in the Anglican schools operating within the diocese);
- teachers of Religious Education;
- school Chaplains.

2. GLOBAL AIMS AND OUTCOMES

The following are global aims that guide the teaching of Religious Education in Anglican schools.

Anglican Religious Education:

- makes clear the beliefs and practices of an Anglican understanding of Christianity;
- encourages the development of values and reasoning within an Anglican Christian framework;
- connects with and adds value to students' life and experiences;
- develops students' critical and reflective thinking about faith and the 'big questions of life';
- encourages a broad understanding of significant religious belief and practice from around the world.

OUTCOMES

Through participation in this course students should:

- have a clear understanding of the beliefs and practices of the Anglican understanding of Christianity;
- engage with spiritual concepts in a manner which causes them to reflect on their own spiritual development;
- develop an appreciation of the value of faith and belief in people's lives;
- appreciate and value the diversity and commonality of all faiths;
- analyse the nature, value and impact of Christian traditions and practices;
- understand the form, function and purpose of the bible and the diverse manner in which it is interpreted and understood.

3.1 COURSE ORGANISATION

TIME ALLOCATION

The recommended minimum number of hours of timetabled school time, including assessment, for a course of study developed from this syllabus is:

Primary: either a minimum of two periods per week (based on the normal length of the schools lesson periods) or a minimum of 40 hours per year.

Secondary: either a minimum of two periods per week (based on the normal length of the schools lesson periods) or a minimum of 60 hours per year.

A course of study in this syllabus consists of units of work exploring the core strands across a three year period. The recommended approach is to create units that fit within a single term. With six strands and twelve terms it is recommended that each strand be covered as a major theme for two units of work across a three year period.

Units of work should be developed using the two key approaches outlined below.

3.2 KEY APPROACHES - LEARNING ABOUT AND LEARNING FROM

This syllabus encourages a balance between two pedagogical approaches: learning about and learning from religion.

LEARNING ABOUT CHRISTIANITY AND RELIGION

Learning about religion requires pupils to engage with religious beliefs, teachings sources and practices,” and “it focuses ones attention on acquisition of knowledge” (Erricker et al., 2011, p. 24).

This approach, Learning About, focuses on assisting students to develop a broad knowledge and understanding of Christianity and other world religions. Learning About enables students to engage with complex themes and analyse the interconnectedness between religion and people.

LEARNING FROM CHRISTIANITY AND RELIGION

Learning from religion is generally interpreted in agreed syllabuses to include pupils own responses to some of the issues that are explored within religious practice and belief and seeks to look for and recognise parallels in their own experience. It encourages students to consider what can be learnt from religious interpretations of life’s experiences, there by contributing to children’s own spiritual development and encouraging empathy and understanding about the religious beliefs and practices of others” (Erricker et al.,

This approach, Learning From, encourages students to move beyond content knowledge about Christianity and other religions, and to reflect on how it might be used as a resource for living their own life.

A COMBINED APPROACH

A balanced relationship between these two dimensions is vital to the quality of Religious Education in any school, and all educators are encouraged to consider deeply how both approaches are expressed in their school's Religious Education program.

The primary source of religious teaching and learning in Anglican Schools is the Christian faith. Accordingly, greatest emphasis is to be placed on learning about and learning from Christianity in our classes.

UNITS OF WORK – A THREE YEAR STRUCTURE

Within this syllabus a three year spiral structure is proposed. This means that term units of work should be developed that use each of the six strands (listed below), at least once, and preferably twice, across the three year period. This enables students to revisit concepts at a more complex level four times in their schooling.

THE SIX STRANDS

The Six Strands cover a broad spectrum of religious concepts.

THE STRANDS ARE:

1. THE BIBLE AND CHRISTIAN BELIEF (BCB)

The Old and New Testaments are the foundational documents for the Christian faith. In this strand students will develop an understanding of the content, structure and context of the Bible and approaches to its interpretation. They will explore important beliefs emerging from the scriptures and reflect on their relevance and role in their own life. Teacher should aim for a balance between Old and New Testament while recognising the importance of the Gospels to the Anglican tradition.

2. CHRISTIAN TRADITIONS AND PRACTICE (CTP)

Christian thought and practice are shaped by thousands of years of history and tradition. This strand will explore how Christians have developed their lives around their beliefs throughout history and into the modern era. It has a particular focus on Anglican worship, sacraments and practice. Students will reflect on the way these traditions and practices are life-giving for them in the contemporary Australian context.

3. WORLD RELIGIONS (WR)

Religious belief is a central element in many people's lives across the planet. In Australia, the landscape of belief continues to change and diversify. This strand helps students to understand the beliefs and practices of religions other than Christianity. Students will be encouraged to reflect on the way that these religions act to help people live a life of purpose and meaning.

4. CHRISTIAN LIVING (CL)

Christians are called to live their lives in a particular way, with a special emphasis on holiness, faithfulness, mercy, reconciliation, justice and ethical behaviour. The focus of this strand is how the Christian life can provide guidance on living in a way that loves God and neighbour, cares for creation and provides meaning in life. It engages with the important issues that affect young people and helps them explore ethical and life-giving actions.

5. THE INNER LIFE (IL)

The importance of the inner life to personal well-being is increasingly being recognised. This strand explores Christian thought and practice as it relates to the cultivation of a person's inner spirituality. Students will be encouraged to explore practical approaches to Christian spirituality, including the forms of worship, meditation, silence and stillness.

6. THINKING ABOUT RELIGION (TR)

People often ask philosophical and theological questions about religion and faith, seeking logical and rational answers. This strand considers these questions, seeking to explore the intellectual foundation of the Christian faith and the philosophy of religion.

IMPLEMENTING THE STRANDS

Each strand lends itself to being taught primarily through one of the two approaches, Learning About or Learning From.

In order to bring depth, richness and creativity to the development of units this syllabus encourages the use of major and minor strands for each unit. It is recommended that each unit has a major theme focussing on one strand and approach a minor theme drawing on a different strand and approach.

For example, a unit could be developed using 'The Bible and Christian Belief' (Learning About) as the major strand and using 'Christian Living' (Learning From) as its minor strand. In this way, while content about the Bible and Christian Belief is learnt, reflection on how it might apply to a student's life is also explored.

Another example would be using 'The Inner Life' (Learning From) as the major strand and pairing it with 'World Religions' (Learning About) as the minor strand. This unit might have students learning experientially about how to pray, meditate and be still in the Christian tradition, while also learning what these practices look like in other religions.

When planning a unit of work, the following should be developed:

- an overview that outlines the scope and sequence of the unit;
- an outline of how the 'Learning About' and 'Learning From' approaches will be used;
- inquiry questions, ideas and concepts that reflect the aims and objectives;
- learning experiences that allow students to explore information and reflect on its application to their own life.

When developing a unit of work, decisions should be made about the:

- nature and purpose of the assessment instrument(s);
- resources required for the unit;
- an increasing level of challenge to students and provide opportunities for them to achieve the general objectives;
- appropriate level of challenge for all students;
- learning opportunities provided to enable all students to achieve the general objectives.

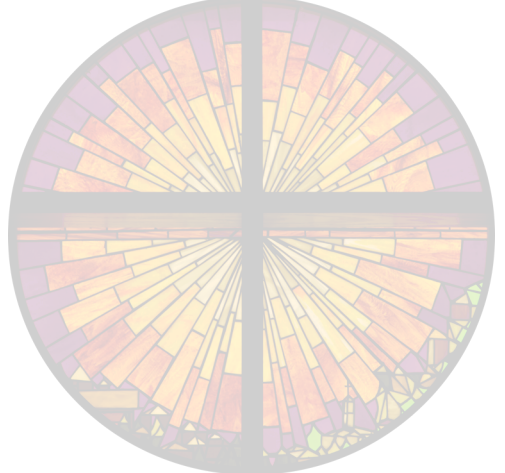

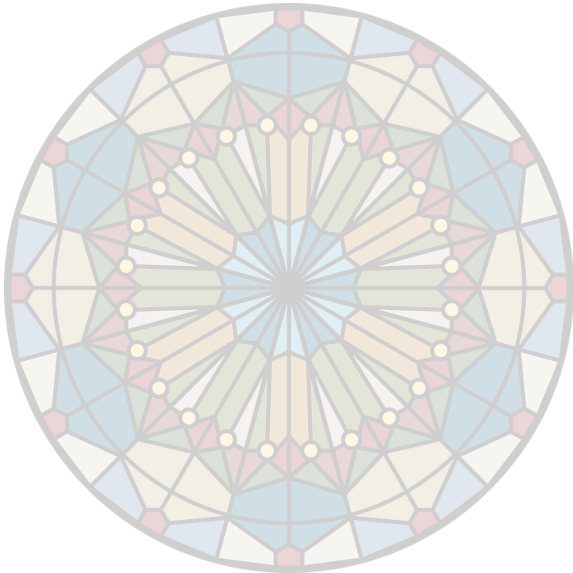

WORK PROGRAM REQUIREMENTS

A work program is the school's plan of how the syllabus will be delivered. This allows for the special characteristics of the individual school community and its students. The school's work program should meet the recommendations outlined in this syllabus and demonstrate that there will be sufficient scope and depth of student learning to meet the general objectives.

You are NOT required to incorporate all of the statements in the Strand Tables below into your work program; however you are encouraged to develop a program utilising a broad range of statements from across the strands.
